ABSTRACT:

A method of producing a free standing structure, the method comprising: providing a substrate having a raised pattern formed on a surface of said substrate, said raised pattern comprising at least one material which forms said surface; depositing material over said raised pattern; and dissolving said substrate to release said deposited material to form said free standing structure from said released deposited material.